Fissler Cookware Product Information, Usage & Care

35. Where is the Fissler Cookware made?

The Fissler Cookware range is produced in China.

36. Can the Fissler Cookware be used on all types of cooking tops?

Yes, the Fissler Cookware is suitable for all cook tops, including Induction cooking.

37. Is Stainless Steel Cookware safe to use?

Stainless steel is a very good all-round general-purpose cookware. The stainless-steel body makes it durable; easy to use, easy to care for and doesn't react with food. The multi material base delivers fast heat conduction and distributes heat evenly.

38. What should I do before I use the Fissler Cookware?

Please take the time to read the Use and Care Instruction Leaflet and Instruction Card which can be found in the product packaging. Handwash your cookware in warm soapy water before the first use. You can also visit www.tccuseandcare-fissler.com for the latest use and care information for your new Fissler Cookware.

39. Is the Fissler Cookware dishwasher safe and what is the best way to clean it?

Yes, all the Fissler Cookware items are dishwasher safe. Regular dishwasher cleaning will eventually affect any cookware and therefore handwashing using a non-abrasive cloth is recommended. Do not use steel, wool, or other metal pads as this will avoid damaging and scratching the inside surface of your cookware. Always allow your cookware to cool before placing directly in water or placing on a wet or cold surface.

40. Should I use oven gloves to handle the Fissler cookware?

It is recommended to use oven gloves with any stainless steel cookware as the handles may become hot with use. Do not use a wet cloth to remove or handle a hot lid. To prevent accidental bumping by people or children, always leave the handles facing the back or side of the stove, ensuring it does not stick out over the edge or over another burner.

41. Why do the Cookware handles sometimes feel hot to touch?

Ensure that your heat source is only heating the base of your cookware and not the sides or the handles.

42. What type of cooking utensils should I use when cooking?

Do not use any sharp edged or metal utensils or cut food directly in the cookware to avoid damaging and scratching your cookware. Use only nylon, plastic, silicone or wooden utensils. The Fissler Turner is ideal for using with your Fissler Cookware and can be redeemed with only 20 Cookware Credits for free or alternatively 10 Cookware Credits + $10.

43. What is the non-stick coating on the 20cm Frypan and 28 cm Wok and is it made free from PFAS?

Both the 20 cm Frypan and 28cm Wok have a ceramic non-stick coating that is made without the following types of PFAS: PFOA, PFOS and PFHxS, making it a great way to cook. Additionally the stainless steel saucepan, frying pan 28cm and casserole pot are also made without PFOA, PFOS and PFHxS.

44. How do I best use and care for ceramic non-stick coated items (20cm Frypan & 28cm Wok)?

- Only cook on a low to medium heat
- Never preheat the pan for more than 10 seconds
- Only use a small amount of oil or butter and never use cooking sprays
- Always check the burner size matches the base of the pan
- Avoid stacking ceramic pans inside each other to protect the coating

45. How do I best use and care for Cookware that doesn't have a non-stick coating (Saucepan, 28cm Frypan, Casserole Pot)?

- Preheat the pan before adding in oil or butter for cooking
- Always use a little oil and for best results, cook on a medium heat source
- Always check the burner size matches the base of the pan
- Do not add salt to your pan until the liquid is at boiling point otherwise it can cause white spots or pits in the stainless steel which cannot be removed

46. Can the Fissler Cookware go in the oven?

Yes, all stainless steel items can be used in a conventional oven but there are temperature and time restrictions to adhere to. The cookware is oven safe up to 230°C for 1 hour. The handles may be extremely hot after oven use, so always pay particular attention to your safety and surroundings and use oven gloves. The cookware should never be used in a microwave oven.

47. Can I use the cookware for prolonged marinating?

No, it is not recommended for prolonged marinating of food. Acidic ingredients such as vinegar, lemon juice and soy sauce may degrade the ceramic coating.

48. Why are there measurements etched inside the 16 cm Saucepan and 24 cm Casserole?

These are internal capacity indicators to help you to measure liquids being added to the pan.

49. Is it okay to leave the cookware on an oven top for a long period of time?

No. Never leave the cookware on a hot burner for longer than is necessary or allow the pan to boil dry. Avoid overheating oils or fats and never leave your cookware unattended when cooking.

50. I am experiencing some bronzing, or blue/rainbow coloured tinting on my stainless steel pans. Is this normal and what causes this?

It's completely normal for your new stainless steel pans to change a little as you use them. You might see some "browning", "rainbow" tints or blue and gold colors appear on the surface. Don't worry, this is usually just a sign of the pan getting hot and won't change how it cooks. If you want to try and remove this colour effect from your pan you can try to use a gentle specialty stainless steel cleaning product, applied with a non-abrasive pad or soft cloth, and follow the cleaning instructions. See the FAQ on the best way to care for your Fissler pans for more tips. You can also visit www.tccuseandcare-fissler.com for the latest use and care information for your new Fissler Cookware.

51. What are some tips to best care for my Fissler pans?

Here are a few simple ways to keep your Fissler pans looking like new:

The Basics: Daily Care

- Keep it simple: Most of the time, all you need is warm, soapy water and a soft sponge or cloth
- Cool down first: Always let your pan cool before washing. Putting cold water straight onto a hot pan can cause the metal to warp
- Dry thoroughly: To prevent those little white water spots from appearing, dry your pans with a towel immediately after rinsing

Tackling Tough Spots

- For "browning" use gentle cleaners: If you use a specialty stainless steel cleaning product, always apply it with a non-abrasive pad or soft cloth to keep the finish smooth and shiny
- For rainbow colors or "heat tint": These are harmless, but if you want them gone, a splash of white vinegar or lemon juice usually does the trick. Just wipe the surface, rinse, and dry
- For stuck-on food: No need for heavy scrubbing! Fill the pan with warm, soapy water and let it soak for about an hour. For really stubborn bits, you can boil a mixture of water and vinegar (or a little baking soda) to help loosen them up

A Few Expert Tips

- Avoid the "Big Heat": High-quality pans like these distribute heat so well that you usually only need Low to Medium heat. Overheating can lead to more stubborn discoloration
- Salt after boiling: When cooking pasta or soup, wait until the water is boiling before adding salt. This prevents tiny pits from forming on the steel surface
- Skip the harsh stuff: Avoid using steel wool, metal scourers, or oven cleaners, as these can scratch and dull your beautiful pans

52. I've never cooked with stainless steel pans before - are there any cooking tips to get the best result?

The secret to non-stick stainless steel cooking: The Leidenfrost Effect. Mastering your new stainless steel pans starts with a fun bit of kitchen science called the Leidenfrost Effect. For a novice cook, this is the "secret handshake" that tells you exactly when your pan is ready to cook—without the food sticking!

What is the Leidenfrost Effect?

Think of it as a natural "non-stick" cushion. When a drop of water hits a pan that is at just the right temperature, it doesn't just evaporate. Instead, it forms a tiny protective layer of steam that lets the water—and your food—glide across the surface like it's on a hovercraft.

How to use the "Water Drop Test"

Before you add your oil or butter, follow these simple steps to get the perfect sear:

- Warm it up: Start by heating your pan on medium heat for about a minute or two.
- The Test: Flick a few drops of water onto the surface.
- Too Cold: If the water just sits there and bubbles, the pan isn't ready.
- Too Hot: If the water disappears instantly with a loud hiss, turn the heat down slightly.
- Just Right: If the water drops stay whole and dance or roll around like little marbles, you've hit the sweet spot!
- Start Cooking: Now, wait for the water spots to evaporate, add your oil, and put your food in. Because you've waited for that "steam cushion," your meat or veggies will sear beautifully rather than sticking to the steel.

Why this makes cooking better

By using this effect, you don't need to guess if the pan is ready. It prevents the frustration of food tearing when you try to flip it and ensures you get that gorgeous, golden-brown crust every time. Just remember: once you add your food, the pan will naturally cool a little, so keep your heat at a steady medium to maintain that professional performance.

53. What are the features and functionality of the Fissler Cookware products?

- Fissler Turner - The ultimate kitchen multi-tasker. Whether you're flipping your first pancake or sautéing veggies, this turner makes it easy. It's designed to glide right under your food without scratching, and because it's made from recycled stainless steel and heat-resistant silicone, it's as tough as it is gentle. Best of all? Just pop it in the dishwasher when you're done.
- Fissler Saucepan (16cm) - Your go-to for the little things. Perfect for those delicate tasks like melting butter, simmering a quick pasta sauce, or reheating last night's favourites. It's compact and has handy measurement marks inside so you don't need to dirty a measuring cup. - Fissler Non-Stick Frying Pan (20cm) - Crispy results, every time. If you're nervous about food sticking, this is your new best friend. It's the perfect size for searing a steak or cooking fish to golden perfection. The ceramic coating is easy to clean and is made without the following types of PFAS: PFOA, PFOS and PFHxS. It works on any stovetop (including induction) and can even go in the oven (up to 230°C / 1 hour) to finish off your dish.
- Fissler Frying Pan (28cm) - Built for the big sizzle. This coating-free pan is designed for high-heat cooking. It's your secret weapon for getting that perfect brown crust on meats or braising a big family meal. It heats up quickly and spreads that heat evenly, so you don't have to worry about "hot spots" burning your food. Like the rest of the range, it's made from recycled steel and gives you that professional-grade feel every time you pick it up.
- Fissler Non-Stick Wok (28cm) - Stir-fry made simple. The wide, sloped sides of this wok give you plenty of room to toss noodles or sear meat without the mess. It features a safe, non-stick surface made without the following types of PFAS: PFOA, PFOS and PFHxS, and a "helper handle" on the side, making it much easier to carry from the stove to the table. It's durable, reliable, and handles high heat like a pro.
- Fissler Casserole with Lid (24cm) - The king of one-pot wonders. From hearty stews to your favourite Sunday roast, this pot does the hard work for you. The thick base ensures even cooking so your slow-cooked meals come out tender every time. ### 54. Are the Cookware products recyclable?

The Cookware products are not recyclable, however, all of the packaging are fully recyclable in kerbside bins.
